Dear Sir or Madam:

I am writing for guidance regarding UC Berkeley parking policy. In particular, I have noticed signs in prime parking areas that say that parking is reserved for "Nobel Laureate" (see attached on next page).

I would like your advice about the exact nature of Berkeley's parking policy. More concretely, I am thinking about changing my legal name to "Nobel Laureate" and would like to know if this would enable me to park in these spots. If not, would I – if you feel comfortable answering this – have a case to sue the university?

Thank you for your time, and I look forward to your advice.

Sincerely,
